Concave mirror forms real or virtual image

Rear Mirror of a car uses convex mirror.

Image formed will be erect, diminished

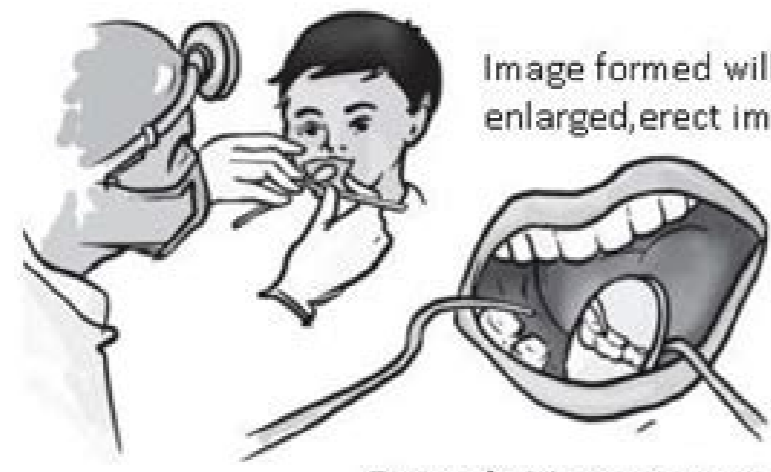

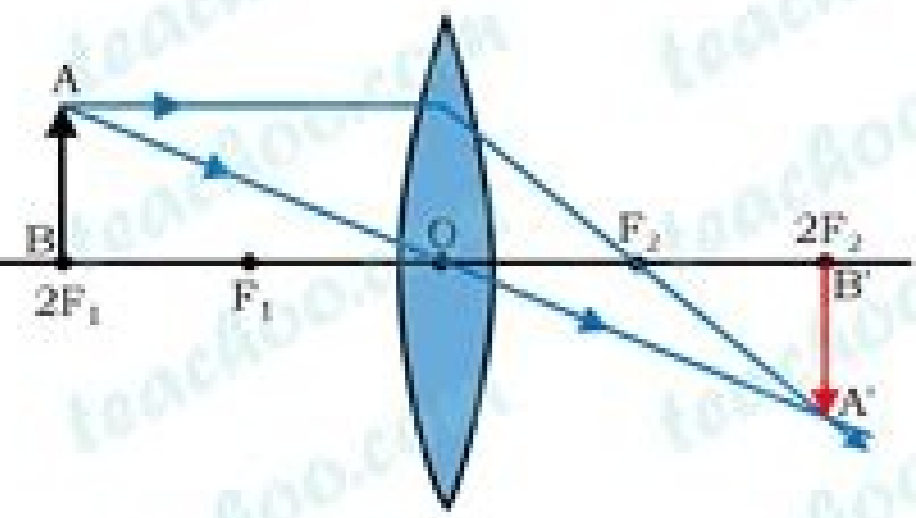

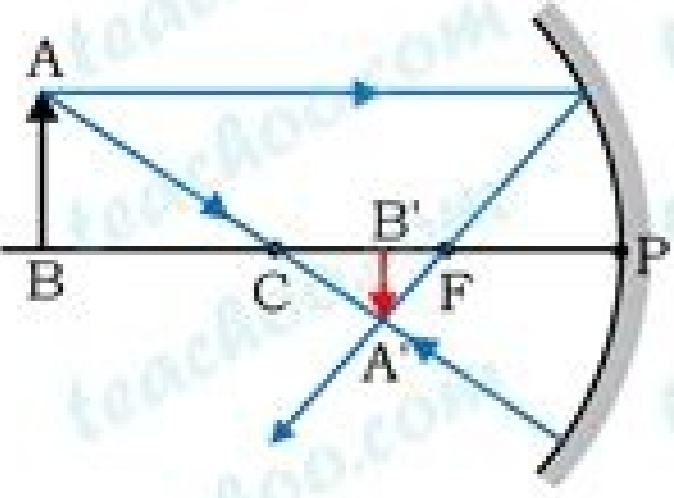

Image formed will be enlarged, erect image.

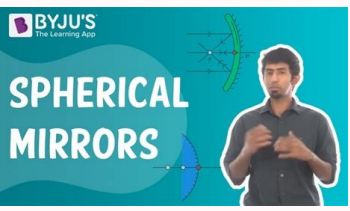

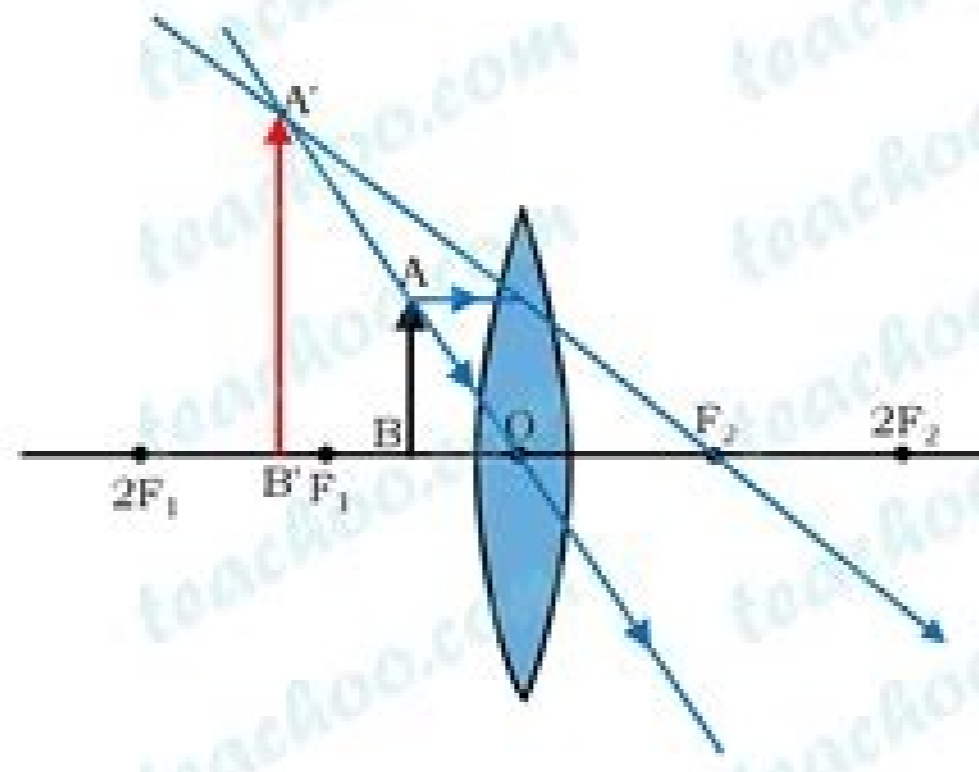

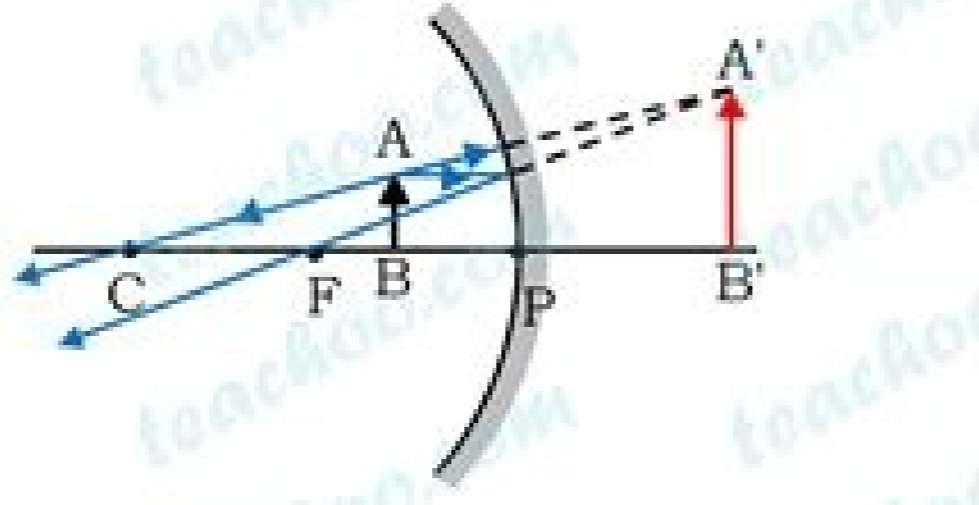

Dentist's Mirror is a concave mirror.

Real Image Vs Virtual Image

The image formed by a flat mirror is always a virtual image, since it cannot be obtained on a screen. When an object is placed at the center of curvature and focus, the actual image is formed at the center of curvature. The size of the image is smaller, as it is compared to the size of the object. The image formed by the spherical mirror can be real or virtual. The size of the image is much smaller in comparison to the size of the object. In general, mirrors are made up for visible light. Images can be of two types: real image and virtual image. Curved mirrors are classified into two types that are concave and convex. The mirror is a surface that reflects a clear image. But they only preserve colour or diffuse light. The size of the image is smaller in comparison to the size of the object. The size of the images is much smaller compared to the size of the object. These images are formed when light falls on a mirror of the object and is reflected backwards by the mirror on the screen. Ray diagrams for convex mirrors: When an object is placed in infinity, a virtual image is formed in the focus. Wait a minute and try again. This angle is the angle of reflection, while the incoming angle is the angle of incidence. Mirrors are used for decoration, to see our clear image, for scientific purposes, in devices such as cameras, telescopes, machines, etc. When an object is placed between the center of the curvature and the focus, the real image is formed behind the center of the curvature. Light is not scattered by mirrors. You can only see it when it hits something through what it is. euq euq ecelbaste euq n'Áixelfer al ed ohcered le erbos rebas somebed ,oepse led otepcnoc le rednerpmoc arap :ovacn'Ác ojeipse :sopit sod ed nos socir'Áise sojepse soL a ray of light passes through a surface and then deflects at some angle. They're both the same. When an object is placed at a finite distance from the mirror, a virtual image is formed between the pole and the focus of the convex mirror. Image Formation by Convex and Concave Mirrors: Ray Diagram for Convex Mirrors: When an object is placed in infinity, a real image is formed in the focus. The flat mirror creates a virtual image, while the curved mirror forms real images. Flat mirrors are flat surface mirrors, while curved surface mirrors produce a clear image with light focus. There can be two types of mirror: Curved mirror and flat mirror. When an object is placed behind the center of curvature, a real image is formed between the center of curvature and the focus. Spherical mirrors are of two types that are concave and convex mirrors. When an object is placed in focus, the real image is formed in infinity. If the curved mirror is a part of the sphere then it is known as a spherical mirror. Convex mirror: The mirror is defined as an optical device that has the ability to reflect the beam of light and form a clear and identical image. A ray of light passing through space is invisible. Share Tweet View Email Print Follow Something went wrong. These types of mirrors form the image when light is bounced off its curve to a specific area. Curved mirrors can reflect light due to their curved surface, while flat mirrors cannot. Some beams are filtered through mirrors, while others are reflected from it. Let us know about convex mirrors and concave mirrors. The size of the image is the same in comparison to the size of the object.
